Yemen national arrested in Ahmedabad in arms racket case Imperial excess: On Governors and limits

West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee's Minister Mamata Banerjee's outburst against Governor Jagdeep Dhankhar on Monday was not a first but it brought to the fore, yet again, the role of the Governor in relation with the elected government and his counterparts in Tamil Nadu and Maharashtra appear to be testing the limits of their power and confronting the elected governments and legislatures in recent weeks. Tired of Mr. Dhankhar's constant tirade against her on Tired of Mr. Dhankhar's constant tirade against her on Twitter, Ms. Banerjee blocked him on the platform. The Governor then sent her a message for "dialogue and harmony amongst constitutional functionaries" but promptly posted that too on Twitter. The Chief Minister said the Governor was trying to treat the elected government as "bonded labour". He has been summoning the Chief Secretary and the Director General of Police on a regular basis, and when they do not General of Police on a regular basis, and when they do not turn up, taking to Twitter and often tagging the Chief Minister. c and limits Governor Bhagat Singh Koshyari has stalled the election of Speaker since the post fell vacant in February 2021. He has taken umbrage over the amendments in the elgislative since the Speaker's election through voice vole instead of secret ballot. The Governor's view that the State Assembly cannot decide its own rules is unacceptable to the ruling coalition, but is being cheered by the Opposition BJP. Mr. Koshyari had in the past batted for the BJP, supporting its demand for a special session of the Assembly on women's safety and security. He had refused to accept the recommendation of the council of Ministers on the nomination of 12 members to the Legislative Council, until the matter reached the High Court. The Governor is required to either send it to the President of India for approval or return it for reconsideration by the Assembly, but the indefinite reconsideration by the Assembly, but the indefinite delay in taking a decision amounts to undermining the legislature, and is unjustifiable. The Bill relates to a question of state-Centre relations, as it proposes to dispense with the National Eligibility cum Entrance Test (NEET) for medical graduate admissions in the State. NEET has been criticised for curtailing State powers, and the Governor's delay in processing the Bill is only aggravating the situation. Some of these issues may require debate and discussion before resolution. But any imperial overtone of Governors can only do harm to the constitutional scheme of things.
